
Home Damaged In Storm

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Doss, near A. J. Skateworld, was heavily damaged on Tuesday evening, August 28th, during an electrical storm.

Mrs. Doss, who has just recently return to her job at Armstrong Furniture, was working. Mr. Doss and their son, Gene, Jr., had just returned to the home when the storm struck.

Mr. Doss felt the house shake with each heavy clap of thunder and in seconds he heard a sound like heavy glass being broken and the basement wall collapsed. Not only was the basement ruined but furniture and appliances were demolished. A washer, dryer, freezer, furnace and other furniture was completely ruined.

A bed in one area of the basement that was used by their son, Gene, Jr., was completely smashed.

Mrs. Doss said, "My husband and I went to bed each night secure in the knowledge that we had one of the best insurance policies available, but since this has happended we find that we are not covered for this damage."

An incident such as this should make homeowners more conscious of just what kind of coverage they DO have.

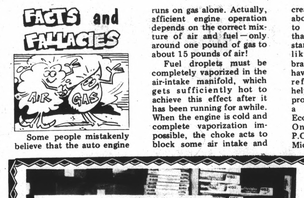
"Appomattox County Marriages, 1854-1890" Back From Publishers

Clyde Nash is shown holding a 'brand-new' copy of the book, "Appomattox County Marriages, 1854-1890." The original records of this period were destroyed when the Appomattox Court House burned. The book, compiled by Vickie Jamerson and Clyde Nash, was taken from duplicates which were on microfilm at the Virginia State Library. The book contains information on approximately 1600 couples who were married in Appomattox County in this time slot; (both black and white couples.) In most instances the name of the bride, groom, their ages, place of residence, occupation, parents' names and the name of the officiating minister is given.

The book should provide invaluable information for both genealogical buffs and those desiring to identify ancestors who may have lived in this county or surrounding counties.

As the book was being compiled it is noted there were grooms from England, Ireland, Scotland, and many states and counties who "came a-courting" and married the fair maidens of Appomattox County. There is even one from the "Kingdom of Parvan"!! Do you have any idea of the location of this place! So far, no one else does either!!



Some people mistakenly believe that the auto engine runs on gas alone. Actually, efficient engine operation depends on the correct mixture of air and fuel—only around one pound of gas to about 15 pounds of air!

Fuel droplets must be completely vaporized in the air-intake manifold, which gets sufficiently hot to achieve this effect after it has been running for awhile. When the engine is cold and complete vaporization impossible, the choke acts to block some air intake and create a richer gas mixture—about 10-12 pounds of air to one pound of fuel—that allows the engine to start cold. Some carburetors, like the ECONOMASTER brand carburetor by Holley, have been designed and refined by experts to help many drivers get improved fuel economy. For a free pamphlet, "Fuel Economy You Can Bank On," write to Dept. N, P.O. Box 3683, Center Line, Michigan 48015.

HELP FOR HEARING IMPAIRED PEOPLE

One of America's major insurance companies has instituted a telephone service for deaf policyholders—one that enables persons with hearing or speech impairments to communicate with the aid of a teletypewriter.

The device consists of a keyboard, video screen and telephone cradle. After dialing the number, the caller places the receiver in the cradle and types a message on a keyboard. The message is then transferred to the video screen of the receiving party.

The National Association of the Deaf estimates that there are more than 20,000 teletypewriters for the deaf now in the United States. Using existing toll-free numbers, this Porta-Tel installed by the Equitable Life Assurance Society can be used by deaf policyholders throughout the nation. If the volume of calls requires it, the system will be expanded.

SICKNESS AND DEATH—1979 SURGEON GENERAL'S REPORT—II

By Allan R. Magie, Ph.D., M.P.H.

Cigarette smokers get sick more often, are sick for longer periods of time, and die sooner than non-smokers. A person's life expectancy at any age is significantly shortened by cigarette smoking.

Overall, current cigarette smokers have a 70 percent greater chance of dying from disease than nonsmokers. (This means that for every 10 nonsmokers who die from any cause there are 17 smokers who die. This comparison provides a death ratio of 1.7.) Death ratios are directly related to how much a person smokes and to the number of years of cigarette smoking. In special danger of dying younger are those who begin smoking at younger ages and those who inhale the cigarette smoke. Although death ratios for smokers are highest at the younger ages and decline as ages increase, the actual number of excess deaths caused by cigarette smoking increases with age.

But there's good news for the person who quits. Former cigarette smokers can expect decreasing death ratios as the years of not smoking increase. Fifteen years after quitting the chance of dying for former smokers is about the same as for those who never smoked. Death ratios for former smokers at any given age are determined by how much they smoked and their age when they began the habit. However, as long as the person is not seriously ill when he stops, his risk of dying is reduced at any age. While women smokers have somewhat less chance of dying than male smokers, those women who smoke as much as a man experience the same death ratios.

When it comes to becoming ill or disabled, cigarette smokers are still the "leaders." As a rule men and women who currently smoke cigarettes develop more acute and chronic conditions than persons who never smoked. At any given age, smoking males are sick about 14 percent more often and smoking females about 21 percent more often that those who have never smoked cigarettes. When all American smokers are counted, this additional sickness due to cigarette smoking amounts to 81 million extra work days lost and more than 145 million extra days in bed because of smoking-related problems.

If you do smoke, stop; and if you don't smoke, don't start.

The Times-Virginian regrets that constantly increasing costs, particularly for newsprint and postage are forcing an increase in our yearly subscription rates.

Our last increase was in October of 1978. Since then the cost of newsprint has gone up twice, from $320 per ton to $345 per ton.

Postage rates for newspapers, as well as magazines, have increased dramatically in recent years. These increases have totalled 413 per cent since 1971. The most recent increase was 22 per cent the first week of July.

Other operating costs have increased as well, leaving the Times-Virginian no choice except to ask our readers to share with us these additional expenses.

For our local subscribers, the annual rate of $7.50 means that the actual cost of each issue is less than 15c.

We share with our readers a great dismay at these, and many other price increases. We find no alternative but to ask the continued support and understanding from our readers, as we endeavor to produce the best newspaper possible at the most reasonable price.
